"The Kingdom of God has come near." With these words, Jesus points away from himself and toward God. It is God's kingdom, God's reign, that Jesus announces. The good news has its origin in God, who here reclaims human lives and demands repentance and faith. Like the prophets before him, Jesus' task is to proclaim God's action in the world, not his own.

ADULT SUNDAY SCHOOL

Faith and Community Class

In response to the racial unrest in our nation, we will continue our discussion by looking at South Africa as a model for dealing with racial inequality and apartheid there. The Belhar Confession is a faith statement that has come from the church in response to South Africa. It has been approved by the PC(USA) General Assembly for inclusion in our Book of Confessions, and now must be ratified by two-thirds of the Presbyteries. Jon Nelson will note what Belhar has to say about racism, and how that might be applicable to our situation in the US. All are welcome in Watts-Hill Hall at 9:45. Mark your calendars now for a screening at FPC of the movie, "The House I Live In" on Thursday, January 29th at 7 p.m.

Lectionary Class

"The end is near. Repent!" Jonah brought that message to the Ninevites, and Paul to the Corinthians, and Jesus to the Galileans. How did they respond? How would you? Join us for discussion at 9:45 in the East Parlor.

Journeys Class

Come and explore Paul's letter to the Galatians, Chapters 5-6, and his principles of Christian freedom. Newcomers are encouraged to join the discussion at 9:45, second floor, classroom at end of hall.

LETTER TO FPC MEMBERS

We are taking the next step on our "interim journey" between senior pastors. Mark Diehl, who has so ably guided us as interim pastor, will finish his work at the end of February. Mark leaves us as planned, having completed his contract and successfully led us to the stage when the Pastor Nominating Committee opens our search for a new pastor. We are grateful for Mark's service and wish him well.

The Session of FPC has approved Marilyn Hedgpeth to once again serve as temporary head of staff beginning March 1. She will be assisted by Sam Miglarese and Sarah Finbow, who have agreed to enhanced roles until we call a permanent senior pastor -- anticipated within the year.

What can you do during this next phase in the life of the church?

- Attend church Sunday mornings -- Mark Diehl will preach his final message for us on February 15th. Then join our celebration of his interim leadership at the Fellowship Lunch after worship. Beginning in March, we'll enjoy meaningful worship led by Marilyn, Sam and Sarah, who will augmented by guest preachers once a month.
- Volunteer your time -- have you considered helping with fellowship events, pastoral care, or service and mission activities? March would be a great time to volunteer, as our remaining church staff will be stretching further to meet these needs.
- Share your ideas with the Pastor Nominating Committee -- chaired by Paul Baldasare, they are hard at work seeking exciting nominees to consider for leadership at First Presbyterian Church.

The time between senior pastors is a special phase in the life of this church, allowing us to reflect on our history, reconsider our mission, and reaffirm that we - the members of FPC - are the church together. Yours in Christ,

Barbara Gerwe,
FPC Clerk of Session

FROM THE

ASSOCIATE PASTOR

The Gift of Time

Our Stewardship Committee is committed to a comprehensive vision of how we are to understand the notion of embracing time, service and money as generous expressions of our gratitude to a gracious God in Christ. Most of us understand what we mean when we speak of gifts of talent and treasure. However, what do we mean by giving the gift of time? As we begin a new year, with new resolutions and new hope, a reflection on time is, well, timely.

The gift of time refers to commitments we make before God to grow in our own spiritual life. We give the gift of time to ourselves, in a sense, by dedicating ourselves in a deliberate way to the enrichment of our relationships with God. Our personal journeys are so unique that it is impossible for anyone else to decide for us how we should grow spiritually. But, certainly, we Presbyterians are part of an enormously rich tradition of believers who have learned, over the centuries, a great deal about how people best come closer to God.

As a community of faith, we attempt to provide for our members a wide range of opportunities that can appeal to and nourish our diverse membership in the ways of God. Prayer and Worship, of course, are fundamental, and we seek to offer many different times and ways for individuals and groups to deepen their lives of prayer. The Word of God, too, is foundational, and our community has recognized more and more the importance of opportunities to study, discuss, pray over and proclaim and listen to the Scriptures.

Sharing one's faith is particularly productive of growth for many, and so we provide retreat opportunities for men, women and our young people. Some people find that they best grow spiritually by servicing others, and so the many opportunities we offer for serving the needs of the poor and underserved are always seen by us as fundamentally spiritual activities. The list of ways we can make a sacrificial gift of time is long, indeed. This New Year of 2015, I invite you to embrace fully the stewardship of time by giving the gift of time to yourself.

Sam

INVITE A FRIEND TO CHURCH

When communities of faith are inviting and relevant, new people will want to come. A good sign of life and health in a church is growth. All it would take for our church to double in size would be for each of us to invite one friend. Won't YOU invite a friend to church this coming Sunday, January 25?

CONFIRMATION

It's been a difficult few weeks in the life of our congregation, and with that in mind, we will conclude our discussion about baptism, and then look at the topics of death and resurrection. On February 15th we will travel at 9 a.m. to St. Barnabas Greek Orthodox Church for their service at 10 a.m., and then return to FPC. Mentors are always welcome to join us.
