FROM THE

INTERIM PASTOR

What a joy it has been to serve alongside the members and leaders and staff of FPC during this period of transition! Eighteen months ago, I joined this community as you moved from being led by a long-term head of staff toward what was at that point an uncertain and unknown future. During our time, you have identified and enabled leaders to engage the interim process, including mining the rich history of this congregation and envisioning a powerful future of ministry in Durham. You participated in the process and contributed your own hopes and dreams, as well as perceived needs and opportunities of being God's people at Roxboro and Main. And those have been translated by the Pastor Nominating Committee into their search process for the next head of staff.

You have confronted challenges in maintaining a vital ministry to people on the street and the poor, while not overwhelming the staff to exercise that ministry any longer. You have confronted challenges of funding the budget during the most significant financial downturn in recent history. You continue to address expansive human needs within the Durham community because of your love for God and generous response to God's goodness.

A remaining major component is the completion of the search process. I ask you to pray for and support the PNC as they continue their work. Questions that cannot be answered and that serve only to put pressure on the PNC are, "How long will this take? When will we call a new minister? What is taking so long?" I hope you can offer instead words such as "Thanks for taking on this major responsibility." "I'm praying for you." "I know you are giving up a lot to do this work for the congregation. How might we help you?"

Thank you for being the church, and for allowing me to walk with you during this important time in the life of First Presbyterian!

Grace and peace,

Mark
